

MEDIA ALERT

Ricoh Forensics Expert to Give Legal Education Seminar at Harvard Law School

Private seminar will cover tools and techniques used by computer forensics experts

WHO: David Greetham, National Director of Forensic Services, Ricoh Legal

At Ricoh, Greetham is responsible for Ricoh Data Forensics Solutions, a spectrum of services that can help corporate legal divisions and outside counsel quickly, safely and cost-effectively manage this critical component of eDiscovery. An expert in Computer Forensics, Greetham is the inventor and developer of Remlox™, a patent pending forensically sound remote collection tool which has already been used in 36 countries around the world. Additionally, he has testified as an expert on numerous cases both in the United States and internationally. Greetham is a Certified Fraud Examiner and a Certified Computer Crime Investigator, as awarded by the High Tech Crime Network.

WHAT: Computer Forensics – Beyond the Basics

With the defensibility of data collections and examinations more important than ever in identifying, collecting and producing electronically stored information (ESI), Greetham's seminar will cover pertinent areas of eDiscovery while taking a look behind the curtain at the tools and techniques used by Computer Forensics experts, and how this can assist law firm clients in litigious matters.

WHERE: Harvard Law School, Wasserstein Caspersen Center, 1585 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge, MA.

WHEN: Wednesday, February 12, 2014, 12:00–1:30 p.m. EST, private event.
